David Manly

David Manly is a science writer and journalist who lives in Ontario, Canada. He holds degrees in biology and zoology, as well as a master's in journalism. David's fascination with animals and the biological world can be traced all the way back to going to the zoo as a kid and staring at the rhinos, snakes, orangutans and more with a sense of awe. Even after all this time, the sense of wonderment and drive for learning as much as he can is still as strong as ever, and one that continues to expand. His passions are science communication, animals, and the general bizarre nature of day-to-day life.
