

Twelve Months of Manly

Description

I have decided to do something which I have yet to do here on my blog, and that is participate in an Internet fad, which in this case is called "Twelve Months."

The rules are simple:

-Post the link and first sentence from the first blog entry for each month of the past year.

So, let's see what turns up!

January:

Two interesting things have happened to me over the past few days. (I had just gotten a letter in the mail from the Prime Minister's Office)

February:

Yeah, I know it's been a while. Yeah, I know you all have been eagerly awaiting my next post. (Posted all my tweets about the science conference I went to)

March:

Based on my background, as well as my thesis, many people assume that I am an animal guy through and through. Granted, my thesis was on frog salinity tolerance, and I know quote a bit about a vast majority of animals " but that is not my only area of interest. (Book review of SUPERBUG)

April:

NO Posts (Had just graduated and began looking for work in earnest)

May:

Welcome, welcome, welcome! (Changed the name of my blog to "The definitive host" from "Musings of a Manly.")

June:

Sorry for the long delay between posts, but it's gotten surprisingly hectic over here. (Posted my Masters project on black-footed ferrets)

July:

NO Posts (Working for someone in Texas)

August:

NO Posts (Went to Europe)

September:

NO Posts (Started a new full-time job, and did not make me want to write even more)

October:

Hey there folks, sorry for my prolonged absence! (Posted all the links to my LabSpaces posts that I had been making over the past few months)

November:

NO Posts (Sorry â€¦ but the job was eating up a lot of time)

December:

Are there aliens among us? (About the Arsenic Aliens story)

Quite the busy year, eh?

But donâ€™t you worry, as this trend of months going by without a post shall continue no more! One of my New Yearâ€™s Resolutions is to write more on my blog, as well as workout more and finish my novel â€¦ itâ€™s going to be a great year ðŸ™,â€
